

This is the day the Lord has made

This is the day the LORD has made; let us rejoice in it and be glad (Psalm 118:24). This verse from Psalm 118 has been inextricably linked with Easter, because there can be no day of greater rejoicing than when Jesus rose from the dead. The Easter Proclamation commends the hosts of heaven to exult: “Exult, let them exult, the hosts of heaven, exult, let Angel ministers of God exult.” The heavens rejoiced and all the earth rejoiced, because by rising from the dead, Christ has brought about both victory over the death caused by sin and a new participation in grace. It is the hope of our future resurrection as it opens for us the way to a new life.

The word “Alleluia” is a Hebrew phrase meaning “Praise the Lord.” Alleluia can be used as an expression of worship or rejoicing; as an expression of rejoicing, it is primarily associated with Easter, which is a time of great celebration following the Resurrection of Jesus.

What is the resurrected body of Christ like? The resurrected body of Jesus is the same body He had on earth but in a glorious state: Jesus showed His disciples the marks on His body – the same body that had been tortured and crucified; the resurrected body of Christ still bears the traces of his Passion. (cf. Luke 24:39-40; Jn 20:20,27) Yet at the same time, the resurrected body of Christ possesses the properties of a glorious body, which is not limited by space and time but able to be present however and whenever He wills (cf. John 20:19, 26). (CCC 645)

Where is the resurrected body of Jesus now? Jesus, in His resurrected body, is in heaven: God the Father's power “raised up” Christ His Son and by doing so perfectly introduced His Son's humanity, including His body, into the Trinity. (CCC 648)

Did Jesus perform miracles after His Resurrection? While some New Testament accounts depict Jesus performing post-resurrection miracles, such as the miraculous catch of fish (John 21), it's important to note that these are not primarily healing miracles as those during His earthly ministry. The post-resurrection miracles often are related to Christ's presence with the apostles, rather than a focus on physical healing. After the Resurrection, the focus of salvation history shifts to the Church. After His Resurrection and Ascension, Jesus transitions to empowering the church and the apostles to continue His work through the Holy Spirit. This shift involves delegating the responsibility for healing and other spiritual gifts to believers.
